

Dahvi Wilson, Vice President of Public Affairs, Apex Clean Energy

Dahvi leads Apex's public affairs team, a unique department of the core operations team that is focused on preserving and enhancing the company's license to operate in statehouses and communities across the nation. Under Dahvi's leadership, Apex's public affairs team is working to rapidly innovate an approach to engagement that is relationship-based and politically savvy, rooted in a campaign mentality. In her nearly seven years at Apex, Dahvi has built a team from the ground up, led the development and implementation of a new approach to engagement, and overseen a successful effort to increase Apex's influence with key legislators and strategic partners. Prior to joining Apex, Dahvi served in leadership roles with numerous community, government, and nonprofit organizations, specializing in strategic development, community relations, and communications. Dahvi holds a Master of Environmental Management degree from Yale University and a BA from Brown University.